www.robink.com/vbshapedformcreator/download.html.Q: Using a column from Excel file as array key in PHP I want to retrieve rows from an Excel file using one column as the array key, and I am able to do that by replacing the first one with "1". But then the rest of the array keys are ... I can easily convert the key from "1" to a proper array key using the following code: `$source_column = str_replace(chr(32), "", $source_column); $source_column = trim(substr($source_column, 0, 1)); $array_keys = array($source_column => $source);` But is there any other method in PHP where I can tell PHP to treat the first column as array key? A: If you want the column number to be the key, then use the `array_column` function. It works as follows: `$input = array('a' => 'apple', 'b' => 'banana', 'c' => 'cucumber'); // 0 => 'a' (1st column), 1 => 'b' (2nd column), 2 => 'c' (3rd column) $keys = array_column($input, 0); print_r($keys); // print a, b, c` This function retrieves the 1st, 2nd and 3rd column (numbered starting from 0) as array values, so you can use them as keys as you like. Edit: You can create your own function that works like `array_column`. It uses the common way of array keys: `function array_column($input, $column) { return array_combine($input, array_column($input, $column)); }` This function returns an
